ABRIDGED PBS KVIE

Your source for local news

Ryan Lillis
Associate General Manager,
News

Like many regions across the country, Sacramento is facing a local news crisis.

Thousands of journalists have lost their jobs. Publications have closed their doors. Consolidation and corporate ownership have led to many communities being served by media organizations that are driven more by profit than service. Too many voices and issues are being ignored.

At PBS KVIE, we believe this region deserves better. So do many other dedicated journalists, which is why in the past decade hundreds of nonprofit news organizations have launched across the nation. The emergence of nonprofit news organizations has helped fill a void in hundreds of communities where public service journalism — journalism that puts communities first — is lacking.

That's why we launched Abridged by PBS KVIE. Last month, we were honored to be accepted as a member of the Institute for Nonprofit News, a national group representing news organizations that are "nonprofit, nonpartisan and dedicated to public service." We were one of 14 news organizations granted full membership in INN this year, joining a prestigious list of newsrooms from Alaska to Maine.

INN was formed in 2009, in the early days of nonprofit news. To me, the guiding light of nonprofit news is who it is accountable to: the public it serves, not shareholders or corporate entities. Being a member of INN will provide opportunities to learn from and collaborate with the best organizations in this emerging field.

"If there is a common thread to the 22 newsrooms accepted as full or provisional members in the INN Network, it's that they focus on community — lifting up underrepresented voices, issues and regions," Jonathan Kealing, chief network officer at INN, said in announcing the new members. "This confirms what we are seeing across the nonprofit news field, that the one-size-fits-all model of the legacy newspaper is increasingly less common."

Personally, I love Kealing's emphasis on community. That's why we're here — to serve this community. And we're honored to be placed in such good company with journalists across the country doing the same.

Examine cutting-edge research like high-tech simulations and drone expeditions into thunderclouds to discover what's truly behind these terrifying “rain bombs” and how we can protect ourselves from their growing power.

Wilding 10PM

Discover the extraordinary story of how Charlie Burrell and Isabella Tree — facing bankruptcy and inspired by a new scientific thesis on ecology — dared to take a spectacular leap of faith. Abandoning intensive farming, they handed their 3,500-acre West Sussex estate back to nature. Twenty years later, the Knepp Estate has become a leading light for conservation and an inspiring example of rewilding the United Kingdom.
